

13: Hasn't Science Disproved Miracles?

Suggested Facebook Posts

FB: (from blog) A miracle is a supernatural intervention in the natural order of things. In other words, a miracle is something that is not only unlikely to happen—it is not supposed to happen according to natural law. There are over 250 miracles reported in the Bible, including the sun standing still to aid Joshua in battle (Jos 10), Jesus' many miracles recorded throughout the Gospels, as well as the miracles done by the apostles in the book of Acts. Learn more about how to strengthen your faith at ApologeticsBible.com

FB: (from blog) There are two main arguments against miracles. The first says miracles cannot occur, because such things are literally impossible. The second says miracles have not occurred. Others suggest miracles are impossible because everything can be understood by science. Therefore, it is wrong to suggest that science cannot explain something (like miracles). However, science cannot explain everything. In fact, the statement, "Science can explain everything," cannot itself be proven correct by science. This is another assumption, not a fact proven by evidence. Visit ApologeticsBible.com for more ways to strengthen your faith through the study of apologetics.

Suggested Tweets

TWEET: (from blog) There are over 250 miracles reported in the Bible. #ConfidentFaith bit.ly/More2C

TWEET: (from TM pg 33) The Bible does say that Jesus entered our world and suffered alongside his people. #ConfidentFaith bit.ly/More2C

TWEET: (from ASBS pg. 124) Lev 19:28 is twisted to validate people who want to get their bodies tattooed. #ConfidentFaith bit.ly/More2C